 Intelligence failures and reforms – Seminar#599, July 2009 – Inde

 Rameshwar Nath Kao, founding father of RAW – B. Raman

His name was Rameshwar Nath Kao -- Ramjee to his relatives, friends and colleagues and «Sir» to his junior colleagues. He was the founding father of the Research & Analysis Wing, India's external intelligence agency, created on September 21, 1968, by bifurcating the Intelligence Bureau, which used to deal with internal as well as external intelligence. In 1982, Count Alexandre de Marenches, who headed the French external intelligence agency Service For External Documentation And Counter-Intelligence or SDECE as it was then known under President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, was asked by an interlocutor to name the five great intelligence chiefs of the 1970s. Mr Kao, whom he knew well and admired, was one of the five named by him. He praised the way Mr Kao had built up RAW into a professional intelligence organisation and made it play within three years of its creation a formidable role in changing the face of South Asia in 1971. He remarked: «What a fascinating mix of physical and mental elegance! What accomplishments! What friendships! And, yet so shy of talking about himself, his accomplishments and his friends.»

 Iftar Surprise by ISI Chief – B. Raman

Intelligence agencies share actionable intelligence only when they have common State and non-State enemies. India and Pakistan do not have common enemies.

 ISI chief attends Indian reception in surprise shift

ISLAMABAD: September 10, 2009 was a milestone in the history of India-Pakistan relations. Just a day before the 8th anniversary of the Sept 11 attacks a very important development in India-Pakistan relations took place in the federal capital. It was the first time the head of the Inter-Services Intelligence (ISI), Lt-Gen Ahmad Shuja Pasha, was the guest of the Indian high commissioner, Sharat Sabharwal, at an Iftar dinner at a local hotel. Gen Pasha was wearing a Jinnah style black Sherwani, which is the national dress of Pakistan. Pasha was not the only top ISI official present at the dinner. Two other top ISI officials were also present with their staff. The ISI director-general and High Commissioner Sabharwal exchanged smiles while sitting on the same table in the presence of former National Assembly speaker Gohar Ayub Khan.

 ISI agent's son spills beans on Pak, Nepal link to fake notes

The arrest of the son of an ISI operative has led to some startling disclosures about the influx of fake Indian currency notes (FICN) via India-Nepal border here. Vikki, son of ISI mastermind in Nepal, Majid Manihar, was arrested while trying to enter India to strike a deal with his contacts in the district.

 INTERPOL délivre ses tout premiers passeports

INTERPOL a délivré aujourd'hui ses tout premiers passeports, qui permettront aux Chefs de ses Bureaux centraux nationaux (B.C.N.) et à son personnel d'effectuer des déplacements internationaux sans avoir à faire de demande de visa lorsqu'ils participeront à des enquêtes transnationales ou à des déploiements urgents à la suite d'incidents.

 The National Intelligence Strategy of the United States of America: August 2009

Office Of the Director of National Intelligence, Public Affairs Office, Washington, D. C., September 15, 2009. The 2009 National Intelligence Strategy (NIS) presents the way ahead for the Intelligence Community (IC) to operate as a fully integrated and agile enterprise. Against the backdrop of an increasingly complex and interconnected world, the NIS calls for deepening the understanding of both threats and opportunities to enable wise decisions and effective action. The 2009 NIS lays out the strategic environment, identifies goals, and defines objectives. It sets the IC's priorities and guides current and future decisions on budgets, acquisitions, and operations. It also establishes the basis for accountability and results.

Who's in Big Brother's Database? James Bamford

The Secret Sentry: The Untold History of the National Security Agency – by Matthew M. Aid

October 11, 2009 «NYREV» – On a remote edge of Utah's dry and arid high desert, where temperatures often zoom past 100 degrees, hard-hatted construction workers with top-secret clearances are preparing to build what may become America's equivalent of Jorge Luis Borges's «Library of Babel,» a place where the collection of information is both infinite and at the same time monstrous, where the entire world's knowledge is stored, but not a single word is understood. At a million square feet, the mammoth $2 billion structure will be one-third larger than the US Capitol and will use the same amount of energy as every house in Salt Lake City combined.

Unlike Borges's «labyrinth of letters,» this library expects few visitors. It's being built by the ultra-secret National Security Agency—which is primarily responsible for «signals intelligence,» the collection and analysis of various forms of communication—to house trillions of phone calls, e-mail messages, and data trails: Web searches, parking receipts, bookstore visits, and other digital «pocket litter.» Lacking adequate space and power at its city-sized Fort Meade, Maryland, headquarters, the NSA is also completing work on another data archive, this one in San Antonio, Texas, which will be nearly the size of the Alamodome.

Spies Protest After Intel-Sharing Tools Shut Down

In the finger-pointing-fest after 9/11, the U.S. intelligence community was scorched for not sharing information, and putting parochial interests ahead of good analysis. Which makes it particularly depressing to see that the Office of the Director of National Intelligence is shutting down two of its more important collaboration tools, called uGov and BRIDGE.

Arrêté en Suisse, l'espion russe raconte

C'est une rencontre comme on les imagine en lisant un bon roman de John Le Carré. Autour d'un thé, dans les fauteuils cossus d'un hall de grand hôtel moscovite, un homme au visage grave, aux cheveux blancs et à l'œil vif derrière ses lunettes, raconte. De sa serviette parcheminée, il sort des coupures de presse, le fac-similé d'un acte d'accusation, des photos qui suintent la guerre froide, qu'il range aussitôt jalousement. A 75 ans, Vitaly Vassilievitch Chlykov, ancien espion soviétique, a décidé de livrer ses secrets. Une histoire extraordinaire, au cœur des tumultes du XXe siècle.

Malaya's Secret Police 1945-1960: The Role of the Special Branch in the Malayan Emergency

While the role of intelligence in general and the Special Branch in particular had always been regarded in previous analyses of the Emergency as critical factors in explaining the CPM's ultimate demise, no previous study has provided such a level of detail and analysis of the subject.

Shadow War: The Untold Story of Jihad in Kashmir – Arif Jamal

In an account of the India-Pakistan conflict in the Kashmir region, the author brings to light the hidden history behind the violence, including the CIA's proxy war during the 1980s, the training of insurgents by the Pakistani military, and how CIA money fell into the hands of Kashmiri jihadis.

The hidden world of civilian contractor injuries

The Los Angeles Times and ProPublica spent more than 18 months examining the hidden world of civilian contractor injuries. Reporters and photographers tracked down and interviewed more than 200 contractors, family members, government, military and corporate officials. The Times also reviewed more than 10,000 pages of court documents, previously undisclosed government reports and internal corporate communications.

Department of Defense contractors in Iraq and Afghanistan: background and analysis

By Moshe Schwartz, Specialist in Defense Acquisition. Congressional Research Service. August 13, 2009.

The Department of Defense (DOD) increasingly relies upon contractors to support operations in Iraq and Afghanistan. The use of contractors in Iraq and Afghanistan has raised a number of issues for Congress. This report examines current contractor trends in Iraq and Afghanistan, steps DOD has taken to improve contractor oversight and management, and the extent to which DOD has incorporated the role of contractors into its doctrine and strategy. It also reviews steps Congress has taken to exercise oversight over DOD contracting, including contracting issues that have been the focus of hearings and legislation.

◆ Injured War Zone Contractors Fight to Get Care From AIG and Other Insurers

📄 Corporations and Counterinsurgency – RAND Corporation. August 2009

The insurgencies, civil wars, and humanitarian interventions of the 1990s introduced U.S. military planners, strategists, and analysts to the important roles played in internal conflicts by unofficial entities, such as nongovernmental organizations and private military companies. However, although academic specialists have noted the growing governance and security roles of the multinational corporations, U.S. strategy and policy have been slow to acknowledge the significance of these corporate actors. The role of MNCs in conflict environments is not an entirely novel subject, but many earlier studies have approached this issue from the perspective of corporate social responsibility, human rights, and environmental policy. In contrast, this paper will focus explicitly on MNCs as actors in conflict systems and will consider these firms' efforts to mitigate violence and promote stability through social development and security measures --what might be termed conflict mitigation; conflict transformation; or, more bluntly, "corporate counterinsurgency." The goal of this paper is relatively modest: to introduce policymakers and analysts to the roles MNCs play in the conflict zones.

M Propaganda and Information Warfare in the Twenty-First Century: Altered Images and deception operations

– Scot Macdonald, Routledge, 2007, ISBN: 0415771455

The book begins with a compact and informative history of both psychological operations and military deception techniques and looks at how imagery can be faked, manipulated and misrepresented to further these operations. More recently faked photography has come to light. The Daily Mirror newspaper published set-up photographs of British soldiers torturing an Iraqi youth, the fall out from which resulted in the newspaper's editor being forced to resign. Several press photographs issued by news agencies during the 2006 Israeli-Lebanon conflict were also stage managed and/or retouched.

Propaganda and Information Warfare in the Twenty-First Century is a thought provoking and fascinating read for those new to the subject of psychological operations and deception. My one criticism is the lack of illustrations; when a book is discussing the impact of forged imagery it would be useful to see the image being discussed.

Are US taxpayers funding the Taliban?

USAID probes the possibility that contractors give a cut to the Taliban.

The United States Agency for International Development has opened an investigation into allegations that its funds for road and bridge construction in Afghanistan are ending up in the hands of the Taliban, through a protection racket for contractors.

Taliban's bombs came from US, not Iran

In support of the official United States assertion that Iran is arming its sworn enemy, the Taliban, the head of the Office of the Director of National Intelligence (ODNI), Dennis Blair, has cited a statement by a Taliban commander last year attributing military success against North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) forces to Iranian military assistance. But the Taliban commander's claim is contradicted by evidence from the US Defense Department, Canadian forces in Afghanistan and the Taliban themselves that the increased damage to NATO tanks by Taliban forces has come from antitank mines provided by the United States to the jihadi movement against the Soviets in Afghanistan in the 1980s. But according to the Pentagon agency responsible for combating roadside bombs in Iraq and Afghanistan, the increased Taliban threat to US and NATO vehicles comes not from any new technology from Iran but from Italian-made mines left over from the US Central Intelligence Agency's military assistance to the anti-Soviet jihadists in the 1980s. The claim by the alleged Taliban commander of new, more effective weaponry supplied by Iran appears to have been deliberate misinformation for the Western press.

◆ £48,000 Goes to the Muslim Brotherhood

The Tax Payer's Alliance (TPA) has released figures today on every local authority that has received Preventing Violent Extremism (PVE) funding and what organisations have benefited from it. The PVE fund has so far given out £12 million in tax payer money to projects aimed at preventing radicalisation.

One organisation, the Muslim Welfare House (MWH), has received just under £50,000 in PVE funds over the last two years. The MWH is a member of the Federation of Islamic Organisations in Europe (FIOE), which represents the Muslim Brotherhood (MB) in Europe.

◆ Council Spending Uncovered II No.5: THE PREVENT STRATEGY

The Prevent Strategy is part of the Government's response to the threat of terrorism from Islamist extremists. Aimed at stopping people from becoming terrorists, the Government has given Local Authorities money to fund projects administered by community groups, as well as giving out grants themselves directly. However, there have been ongoing concerns about the groups receiving funding and it has not been clear how taxpayers' money has been spent. The TaxPayers' Alliance has used Freedom of Information requests to compile the data that the Government was unable to give Paul Goodman MP earlier this year. So for the first time, spending on the Prevent Strategy is listed in detail to show how much each organisation received individually in the 2006-07, 2007-08 and 2008-09 financial years.

◆ What Motivates the suicide Bombers? Riaz Hassan. YaleGlobal. September 3, 2009.

The heart-wrenching and horrible daily accounts of suicide bombings rarely reveal the underlying cause of the bombers' motivations. But a comprehensive database at Australia's Flinders University that has compiled information on these types of attacks from as early as 1981 can shed light on such motivations. And the conclusions are startling. For one, the conventional wisdom that bombers are insane or religious fanatics is wrong. Their motivations are complex. Participating in suicide bombing can fulfill a range of meanings from the "personal to communal." Without understanding these motivations and addressing them, it would appear the governments or organizations that seek to end suicide bombings are likely to be disappointed.

- ◆ A violent summer in the North Caucasus: Analysis of the Ingushetia bombing – August 26, 2009.
It is no wonder that the summer of 2009 has been particularly violent in the North Caucasus. The economic crisis is hitting the already heavily impoverished North Caucasus republics hard as Moscow struggles to deliver the billions of aid they rely on. Meanwhile, social discontent and unrest increase, while harsh crackdowns on large parts of the population and large scale human rights abuses drive more and more people to sympathize with and join the militants. In turn, republic and federal security forces crackdown even harder on militants and the population alike, leading to more violence and more new recruits for the militants. Until Moscow seriously considers changing its policies, it (and the North Caucasus) will continue to be trapped in the current morass of worsening violence.

Graham E. Fuller, S. Frederick Starr, Central Asia-Caucasus Institute

Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies, The Johns Hopkins University – 2003

Xinjiang, China's western border province comprising eighteen percent of the country's entire land area, is a region beset by change, and increasingly, confrontation between two very distinct peoples – the more recently arrived Han Chinese and the indigenous Uyghur Turkish Muslims. The confrontation revolves primarily around a struggle for domination over the province and a Uyghur quest for autonomy or even independence from Beijing's rule. Conflicting interests and goals thus offer two quite different visions and narratives of current Xinjiang realities, reflecting the distinct concerns of each people.

Rémi Castets – Les Études du CERI N° 110 - octobre 2004

Moins connu en Occident que le problème tibétain, le problème ouïghour n'en constitue pas moins aux yeux de Pékin une question bien plus aiguë. Après un long black out médiatique sur la question jusqu'en septembre 2001, le gouvernement chinois a finalement publié une série de documents dépeignant l'opposition ouïghoure comme une force terroriste exogène liée aux réseaux jihadistes transnationaux. Une telle rhétorique, qui présente les troubles actuels comme le fait de déstabilisations extérieures, cache cependant un profond mal-être sociopolitique et une opposition qui, dans la réalité, s'exprime selon des formes bien différentes des clichés imposés.
